What's ahead in family living? Here is a prediction in several areas.

Food and Nutrition

Food supplies are abundant and available in great variety at reasonable Prices. The total amount of money spent for food may increase in 1963, due to more processing and distribution services, but the percentage of the income used for food will stay about the same.

The overall per capita food consumption has changed very little since 1950, but our selection has altered. People are less active, so require fewer calories. Consumption of protein especially meat and poultry, has increased, but carbohydrates continue their downtrend. Although fats from meat increased, those from dairy products declined, leaving the total fat consumption average about the same. Consumption of vegetables and fruits remain stable, although more is used in the processed form. The use of milk and dairy products increased slightly, with the big shift to non-fat products such as dry milk and cottage cheese.

Nutrition education is needed to improve food habits among teenagers, young mothers, and overweight people.

Clothing and Textiles

Supplies of clothing are large; prices have risen slightly; and clothing continues to decline in relative importance in the average family budget.

As disposable personal income has increased, the per cent spent for apparel has declined. In 1961, approximately 10 per cent of the average income was spent for clothing, accessories, and jewlry according to the U. S. Department of Commerce.

A relaxed attitude toward clothing as well as selection of casual types of garments minimize increases in clothing expenditures. Skirts, blouses, and slacks are popular for women and girls. Men and boys are buying more separate trousers and coats and fewer suits.

Cotton comprises 67 per cent of fiber consumption, man-made fibers 29 per cent, and wool 13 per cent. The quantity of man-made fibers used in clothing doubled in the last 20 years. Research continues to develop new man-made fibers, new blends, and new uses for old fibers. Many of the newer fibers on the market have these characteristics: warm with little weight, wash and dry quickly, moth and mildew resistant, and resist furling and piling.

New products mentioned are stretch fabrics of cotton, wool, and dracon - wool; no-run seamless hose; nylon and polyester zippers without metal teeth, available for home sewing. A new shoe covering is a high brilliance olefinic surface for all year wear. It looks like patent leather, resists cracking and scuffing, and is cleaned with soap and water.

Coin operated dry cleaning establishments, introduced in 1959, now number 4800, with 2 to 32 machines each. Four times as many are expected in the next few years.

Coin operated dry cleaning appeals to consumers because of its economy and convenience. Some families may wish to use coin operated service for part of their dry cleaning and continue to send some items to commercial cleaners.

Housing

Construction of housing continued high during the first 9 months of 1962. Indications are that the 1963 level may be somewhat below that of 1962, but there should be no difficulty in meeting demand for new units with construction materials adequate and credit terms favorable to buyers.

Recent years have brought increasing emphasis on construction of housing specifically planned to meet needs of the elderly. The Senior Citizens Housing Act of 1962 was passed by the last Congress to promote progress with such housing in urban areas and to stimulate its more rapid development for rural areas. The government's programs apply to persons 62 years of age or older. Persons now approaching 62 may look forward to increased availability of suitable housing for their senior years.

Helping God

Lesson for February 10, 1963

Doubtless God could have made a universe where He did not need help of any kind. Whatever He wanted to do, would be done, and by Him alone. Perhaps, for anything we know to the contrary, He has exactly that kind of universe running somewhere at this moment. But not this one. For His own reasons, and for our great good, God constructed this universe in such a way that if God does not get help in doing things, they will not be done. Not that God requires help in everything. He had any help in creating the universe in the first place, we cannot imagine who could have been His assistant or His blueprint man. God had all the blueprints of the universe in His mind from before the beginning. But — and this is where it begins, while God still reserves the right to act at His own discretion without help of any sort — the universe — or our part of it at least — does not run itself.

Helping the Ignorant

Let it be repeated: this is for our good. It is a wonderful privilege to share in anything God does. It is a marvelous act on His part that He should let any one of us be responsible even for a tiny part of the vast realms of God. But how can we know what God plans to do? How do we know when we are helping Him? There is one thing of which we may be sure: God is always working against evil. He is opposed to evil in every form. So when the Son of God lived and toiled in Galilee, He too was battling against evil wherever He found it. One of the forms of evil is ignorance, error. Not knowing, or thinking that one's thoughts are true when they are not—this is dangerous. So one of the great activities of Jesus was teaching, and he did not try to teach all alone. He trusted certain fishermen enough to send them out two by two, to teach people He would never live long enough to see. And in helping Jesus the disciples were helping God.

Helping the Hungry

Another form of evil is pain, and this has many forms, as we all know. When first chloroform was used to help women in childbirth, many preachers protested. It was not right, they said, to try to make child-bearing bearable. But ministers know better now. All of us are aware that much pain in the world cannot be cured. We know there are limits to what can be done. But when a Christian today sees a hungry child or a suffering man or woman, he dare not say to himself, as our ancestors might have said, "Too bad, but the pain and hunger are sent by God and we need not try to do anything to stop it." On the contrary, Christians are more alert now than they used to be, to the claims of the suffering and the hungry and homeless. Every person you can help, in fact, is a living invitation from God, to be His helper in bringing good to pass in the place of evil.

This is a Real World

Sometimes we long for an easier world to live in. What we want, we think, is a sort of fairy-tale world. In the old stories, which perhaps you read when you were young, you remember there often was a Fairy Godmother. When she arrived, she took over. All you did was sit back, watch her wave her magic wand, and enjoy what she conjured up out of the moonlight and spider webs. Why doesn't God do like that? is our complaint. He doesn't do like that because He is real and not a make-believe fairy. He doesn't do like that because He wants children, not dolls; sons and daughters, not robots. He doesn't do like that because He wanted a universe in which He would have helpers. On the hills of Galilee Jesus fed the great multitude with bread. No one then knew how He did it; but they knew how that bread got from Jesus to the hungry crowds; the disciples carried it. Jesus did what they could not do; He did not do what they could do. God is like that. All over the world the battle goes on, good against evil, comfort against pain, health against disease, truth against falsehood, wisdom against folly. It's God's fight: are you in it?

Southside Coop. Wins 1962 Award

Southside Electric Co - op, of Crewe, Va., won an honorable mention award in 1962's National Electrical Manufacturers Association's annual rural electric cooperative power use contest. The award was given at the annual meeting of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association in Las vEgas Nevada, January 16.

Entries are judged on the basis of kilowatt hour and appliance sales; evidence of complete planning and specific goals; organization and staffing for action and evidence of a balanced program of service to benefit members. The contest was open to all the nearly 1,000 electric cooperatives throughout the nation.

Evans Speaks To FFA

Mr. Dewitt Evans, executive president of the Farmers National Bank, spoke to the Appomattox FFA Chapter at their regular month meeting on Thursday, January 31. Mr. Evans used as his topic "Savings and Credits" in his presentation. Mr. Evans stressed the importance of a systematic saving plan, and the value of having a good credit rating. "Wise credit management is a must for farmers of today", stated Mr. Evans. Ronald Miller, chairman of the FFA committee for Earnings and Savings introduced the speaker for the program.

In other business transacted by the club, the members set February 20, as the date for the chapter public speaking contest. It was also decided to have a joint meeting with the FHA tonight in March with a program centered around FFA-FHA Camp.

Cecil Deaner, chairman of the public relations committee reported on plans for National FFA Week. These plans include an assembly program, a radio program, special news articles, and an exhibit.

The chairman of the Community Service Committee, George Pollard, reported that three Christmas boxes had been distributed by the chapter to three needy families. He further reported that the tree - saws had been constructed for the Oakville Elementary School.

Ronald Millner announced to the club that Eddie Covington had won the grand prize as top salesman in the FFA tractor seat fund raising activity. The top prize was a 22 caliber semi-automatic rifle.

Eight Little Pigs Went To Market

W. O. Slagle, Rt. 2, Appomattox, put a want ad in the January 10 issue of the TIMES-VIRGINIAN. He reports he could have "sold 50 pigs", instead of the eight actually offered.

"I tried to sell them, myself", he explained at the TIMES office last week. "They wouldn't sell."

Then he inserted a want ad, because a "paper gets around". He said that calls came from as far away as Gladstone.

The now who had the eight baby pigs had twenty - one in one litter the last time, Slagle said. Her "score" stands at 13-14-21 — then 8.

New Books for the Appomattox Elementary Library

$419.72 worth of new books have just been received, processed and ready for circulation for the Appomattox Elementary School Library. These titles were purchases through the State Aid plan whereby money from the Literary fund is matched by that of the school and the county on the $60.00 unit plan. The school pays $5.00 — the county $15.00 and the state $40.00 — making a total of $60.00 for each unit. This represents 7 units for the school library for 1962-63.

Mrs. Virginia Beard, librarian, announces that a total of 22,632 books were circulated during the year of 1962, an average circulation of 2,500 per month. The month having the largest amount of circulation was November with a total of 2,984.

Some of the most popular titles have been as follows: Geis, — "Hoe and Why Book of Dinosaurs"; Munch — "What is a Rocket?"; Colby — "Our Space Age - Jets"; Hussong — "Golden Picture Book of Birds"; Sutton— "We were there at Pearl Harbor; Chandler — "Cowboy Sam"; Brown — "Green Eggs and Ham"; Farley — Black Stallion"; Henry — "Misty of Chincoteague"; Orton — "Mystery of the Lost Letter"; Honness — "Mystery of the Diamond Necklace"; Upham — "Little Brown Bear;" Stevenson — Virginia Dare; Manlie — "Mickey Mantle Story."

County Library

Madame Castel's Lodger by Frances Parkinson Keyes —

America's best loved novelist has chosen a hero, Pierre Gusworthy of her inimitable story-telling talents for this new book. Beauregard was a scion of Louisiana's aristocracy, a dashing, brilliant handsome Creole who was an splendidly successful on the battlefields as in the drawing rooms. We are taken back to Beauregard's childhood —his life at West Point when as a young handsome lieutenant he falls in love with the beautiful Laure Villere and marries her after a whirlwind romance—at the age of 47 poverty - stricken, and unable to get work because he refuses to take Oath of Allegiance to the United States — after thrilling episodes in both the Mexican and Civil Wars — and after Appomattox, his enormous zest for life drove him to seek new challenges and a new career for the bitter days of Re-construction.

Mrs. Keyes has wanted to write a story of Pierre Beauregard for many years. She herself lives in the house on Charres Street in New Orleans —the house which is the setting of Madame Castel's Lodger —her first novel was published in 1919. Other books which you will want to read are: Joy Street, Dinner at Antoine's, The River Road and Blue Camellia.

Atlantic Fury — by Hammond Innes.

If you like the "Fury" of the sea and the books of Joseph Conrad, you will enjoy this. It is a powerful novel of men — and a woman — against the elements — with suspense and drama. The author was born in England in 1913 and wrote his first novel at nineteen years of age. Following a career in the Army, he became a journalist and voyager.
